

WE REMEMBER

Child Survivors' Association of Great Britain - AJR

WE REMEMBER is an anthology of memoirs based on the experiences of Jewish children who survived under Nazi rule. Each chapter, written in their own words by a different survivor, gives insight into one family's experience during this terrible period in recent history. Coming from different nationalities, differing cultural, educational and social backgrounds, and families who practised a variety of religious observances including those who barely identified themselves as Jews, our voices are all individual. All aged around sixteen and under at the end of the war, even down to a baby born in Mauthausen concentration camp in April 1945 - possibly the only thing we have in common is that we all had at least one Jewish grandparent and for this were condemned to death.

Some of us survived in hiding, some on the run and even under Russian 'liberation'; others survived concentration camps. Some remained with family members, some, post-war, returned to traumatised and broken families, while others were the only ones of their families to survive.
